JACKIE ROBINSON

Jackie Roosevelt Robinson was born on January 3, 1919, in Cairo, Georgia. He and his family soon moved to Pasadena, California. Jackie was good at sports, even as a young boy. He loved to run, play, and have fun with his friends.

Jackie was the youngest child in a family of athletes.

In high school and college, Jackie didn't sit on the curb and watch others play sports. He would practice a lot. Jackie was good at football, baseball, basketball, and track. Fans cheered for him when he played.

In 1947, Jackie became the first African American to play Major League Baseball. Before that time, African Americans were not allowed to play in the major leagues. Jackie played for the Brooklyn Dodgers. The position he played was second base. Fans would stay to watch him if a game went into extra innings. They roared when the team won.

Jackie played his final game on September 30, 1956. After that, he worked hard to change laws that were unfair to African Americans.
